Preface

This Frequency List of Egyptian Aramaic has been produced for the use of the members of the Oxford University Aramaic class that is running in the academic year 2010 – 2011 as part of the AHRC-funded project entitled: ‘Communication, Language and Power in the Achaemenid Empire: The correspondence of the satrap Arshama’. For details of this project see <http://arshama.classics.ox.ac.uk> .

The Frequency List contains all of the Aramaic lexemes (excluding proper names) found in the Achaemenid Aramaic texts from Egypt edited by Porten and Yardeni,¹ of which a concordance was produced by Porten and Lund.² It also contains all of the lexemes of Biblical Aramaic (Daniel 2.4b–7.28; Ezra 4.8–6.18, 7.12–26; Jeremiah 10.11; two words in Genesis 31.47).

Since many members of the Aramaic class were tackling a Semitic language for the first time, I have vocalised the great majority of the entries in this glossary. This vocalisation has been based on the massoretic vocalisation of Biblical Aramaic, and on that of later Aramaic dialects. Whilst every endeavour has been made to produce historically accurate vocalisation, it should be clear that this has involved much educated guess work, and there will inevitably be both errors and dialectal contamination in the glossary. Let the reader beware!

After each gloss two numerals will be seen. The first indicates the number of occurrences of the lexeme in Egyptian Aramaic, and the second the number of occurrences in Biblical Aramaic. (For this Frequency List only the occurrences in Egyptian Aramaic have been taken into account.) A separate Imperial Aramaic Glossary, arranged alphabetically, has also been produced, and can be downloaded from the Arshama website.

Please report any omissions or major errors to David Taylor (david.taylor@orinst.ox.ac.uk).
